

The Last of the Romanoffs

All photos by Underwood & Underwood.

Last photograph of the former Empress of Russia. In her invalid chair, she is working at her embroidery while others of the royal family worked in the garden. Several of the photographs on this page were made at Tsarskoe-Selo, where the czar and his family were interned before their assassination.

Alexis Nicolaevitch, heir to the Russian throne, and his sister, the Grand Duchess Tatiana, in the park at Tsarskoe-Selo. The family was removed from this place to Tobolsk, Siberia, on the thirteenth birthday of the czarvitch.

The former czar (at right) sawing wood with Pierre Gilliard, tutor of the czarvitch, at Tobolsk, Siberia. In the background is the greenhouse, where the imperial family often sat in the sunlight.

Grand Duchess Tatiana, daughter of the czar, with the aid of one of her guards, carries sod from the garden at Tsarskoe-Selo.

The former emperor shoveling snow in the park at Tsarskoe-Selo.

Working in the kitchen garden. An officer of the guard behind the former ruler of Russia. At right, a sailor named Nagorny.

The young gardeners resting. Left to right: Olga Nicolaevna, Alexis Nicolaevitch, Anastasie and Tatiana Nicolaevna, children of the czar.